Singapore : Star Alliance members Singapore Airlines and United Airlines on April 26 announced expanding their codeshare agreement, tapping into their industry-leading networks to provide customers with more options for travelling between the US and destinations on the other side of the Pacific.

Benefitting both business and leisure travellers alike, the codeshare partners are launching flights to 19 new exciting and fast-growing cities across America, Southeast Asia and the Asia-Pacific region.

From April 26, SIA customers are now able to connect to 10 new codeshare destinations in the US via United flights out of Los Angeles: Austin, Baltimore, Boise, Cleveland, Denver, Honolulu, Las Vegas, Phoenix, Reno, and Sacramento. These new additions also complement the carrier's existing network connections between Houston and Atlanta, Austin, Dallas/Ft. Worth, Ft. Lauderdale, Miami, New Orleans, Orlando, and Tampa.

Reciprocally, United customers can connect to nine new codeshare destinations through SIA Group's network, seven of which are in Southeast Asia: Bandar Seri Begawan, Brunei; Siem Reap, Cambodia; Kuala Lumpur and Penang, Malaysia; and Denpasar (on Bali), Jakarta and Surabaya in Indonesia. They can also make easier connections to Perth, Australia or Male in the Maldives through SIA's network.

The codeshare expansion comes amid increasing demand for international air travel, as more and more countries around the world relax or remove their Covid-era restrictions; especially as destinations across the Asia and Oceania regions that have strictly maintained border bans past two years have now begun to reopen.
