

Thai Airways resumes direct flights to Brussels

- A Monitor Report

Date: 16 June, 2024

Bangkok : Thai Airways will be returning to Brussels Airport in December 2024. There will be a direct daily connection between Bangkok and Brussels which earlier was suspended during the Covid-19 pandemic.

About the development, Arnaud Feist, CEO, Brussels Airport, said, "It is extremely good news to welcome Thai Airways back to Brussels Airport. This daily direct service to Bangkok strengthens our position as a European hub and offers our passengers even more travel options to Asia."

"For Thai passengers too, our airport offers an ideal gateway to the rest of Europe," he added. Thailand remains an important tourist destination that is now once again directly accessible to Belgian passengers.

From December 1, 2024, Thai Airways will immediately start a daily flight to Bangkok. The flights will be launched with a Boeing 787-8.

For Brussels Airport, this offers an important addition to its intercontinental network as a major destination both for tourism and business travel.

"This will reconnect Thai Airways directly to the heart of Europe, with all its European and international institutions," informed Feist.
