

Arabian Adventures' Jeep Adventure Safari is back

- A Monitor Desk Report

Date: 31 January, 2023

Dubai: Arabian Adventures, one of the UAE's leading destination management companies, tour and safari operators, is re-launching an enhanced edition of its Jeep Adventure Safari, due to popular demand.

The fresh itinerary includes additional stops for residents and tourists to take in the best of the country's surrounding desert landscape and its attractions, in a single day.

Tailor-made to highlight 'hidden gems' of the UAE, Arabian Adventures' itinerary covers six key locations to experience from the comfort of a Jeep, with optional hiking to see more. An expert Safari Guide provides transportation and local knowledge throughout the tour, which takes in the wonders of Buhais Geology Park, Camel Rock, 'Valley of the Caves' at Al Faya Mountain, Mleiha Archaeological Centre, Shawka Pools, and Wadi Al Helo.

Buhais Geology Park: It is located on an ancient seabed in the Sharjah desert, consists of a series of interactive exhibits within a visitor centre, which reflects the sea urchin fossils found in abundance in the area. One can experience this first-hand within the centre, and on an outdoor trail to spot fossils and rocks more than 93 million years old, alongside ancient burial sites from the Stone, Bronze and Iron

Ages.

Camel Rock: It is an archaeological Site. Here, clearly visible from over 25km away, Fossil Rock – comprised of fossils millions of years in age – towers in the distance. Travel off-road for a ‘dune drive’ across red sands to find the iconic Camel Rock. This unique rock formation rising up from the sand dunes is shaped like a camel resting.

'Valley of the Caves' at Al Faya Mountain: Jebel Al Faya, shaped like a dragon's back, is an impressive mountain stretching along the Al Faya desert. At its North-Eastern point, Arabian Adventures' guides take visitors to visit the 'Valley of the Caves'.

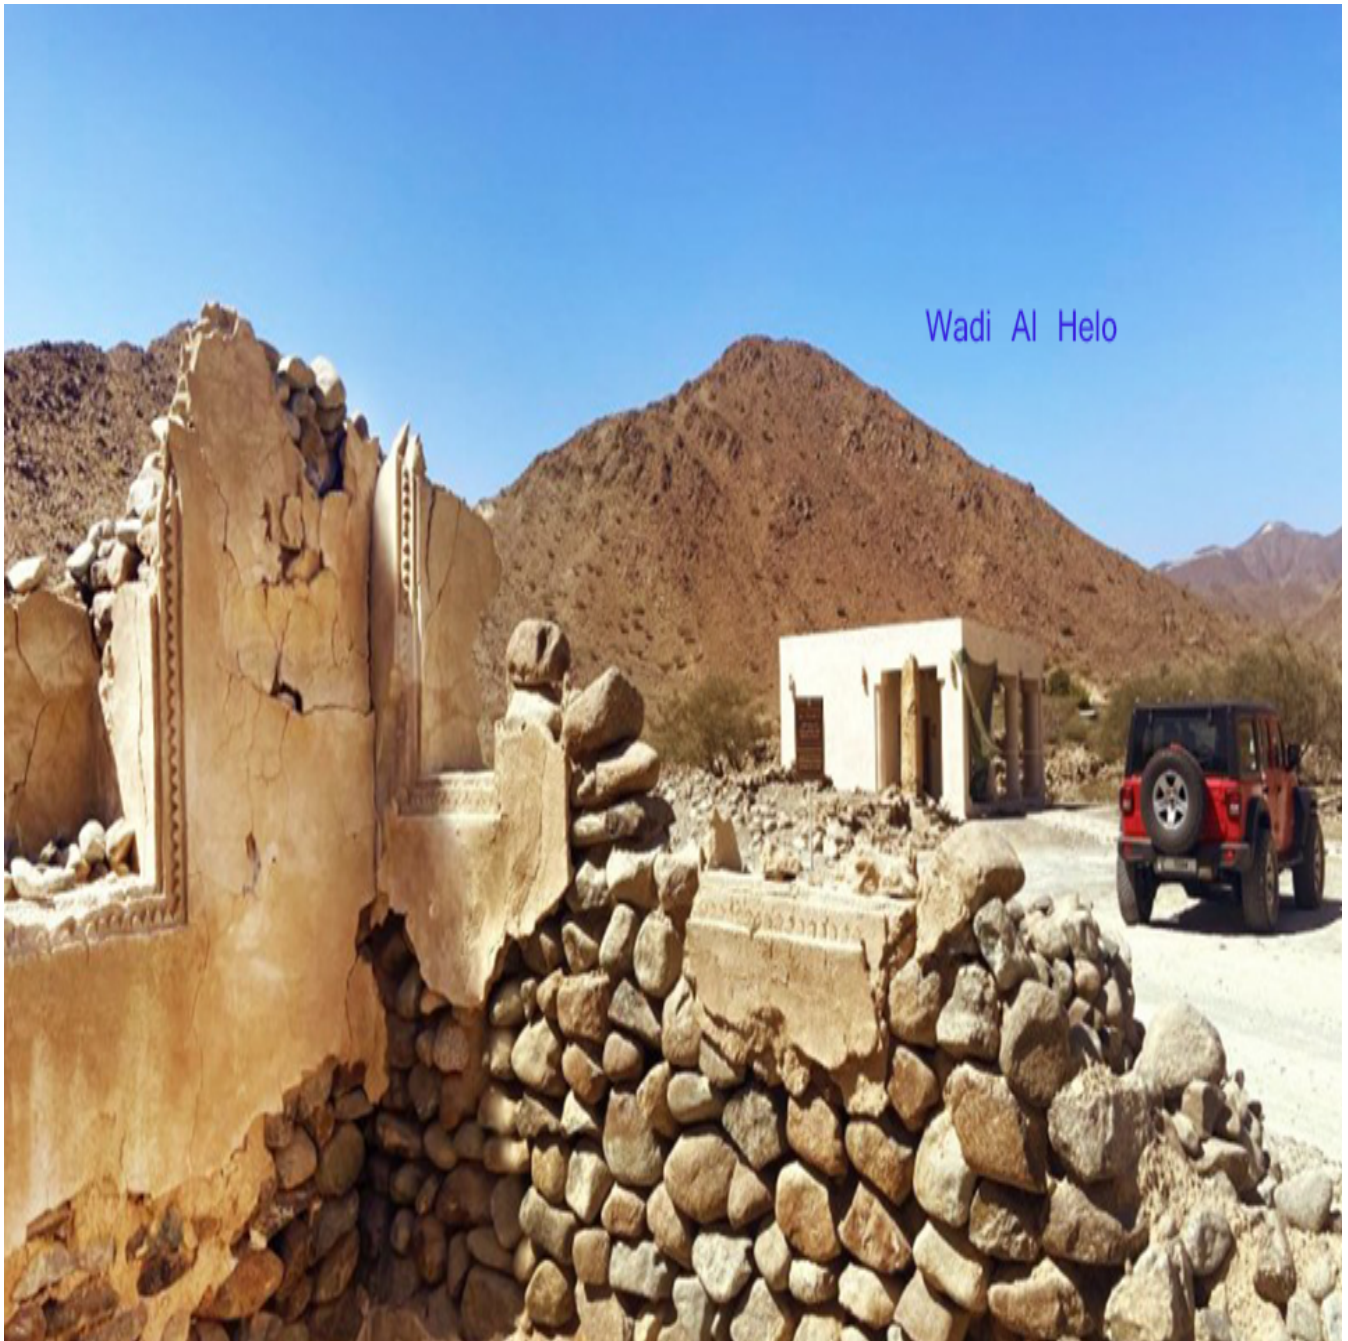

Mleiha Archaeological Centre: Interactive exhibits and ancient arte facts showcase evidence of life in the Sharjah desert several hundred thousand years ago; some of the oldest proof of early human presence in the country.

Wadi Shawka: Popular with off-road and hiking enthusiasts, nestled in the Hajar Mountains of Ras Al Khaimah is Wadi Shawka, comprising the Shawka Pools and Shawka Dam. Here one will spot local wildlife including the eye-catching blue-headed agama on the way to a secluded, tranquil oasis at the foot of rugged mountains.

Wadi Al Helo: Known for its abundance of underground water, which first attracted settlers to the area, Wadi Al Helo – or ‘sweet valley’ – is home to a significant archaeological site for Sharjah and the UAE. Arabian Adventures guides direct travellers to explore its restored Islamic watchtower and evidence of 19th century homes, on to its popular hiking trails. An optional walk to the top of a hill offers panoramic views of the Hajar Mountains from an old fort. From here, spot endangered birds, reptiles and other animals which have made this protected area home.
