- A Monitor Desk Report

Date: 06 February, 2022

British Airways has unveiled plans to add Nuremberg, Germany to its short-haul network from London Heathrow T3.

Flights to the Bavarian city will initially take off four times per week on Mondays, Thursdays, Fridays and Sundays starting on 27 March 2022, increasing to 6 flights per week from 1 May 2022 and returning to four flights per week from 30 October 2022 to 25 March 2023.

“After over 20 months of travel restrictions we know our customers are looking for new and exciting places to visit, so the addition of this route to our short-haul network ahead of the summer season is perfect timing for anyone who would like to plan their trips for the year ahead,” said Neil Chernoff, British Airways’ Director of Networks and Alliances.

“Nuremberg offers something for everyone, ranging from sightseeing in the sunshine to exploring the German markets at Christmas, so we hope our customers take full advantage of this new destination to our network.”

Customers travelling in the airline’s Euro Traveller (economy class) cabin can pre-purchase items from the Speedbird Café, in advance of travel, or can order additional snacks and drinks on board the flight directly to their seat using their mobile device.
