Date: 20 March, 2025

Dhaka: Cathay Pacific has added three new routes for its Boeing 777-300ER aircraft equipped with the Aria Business Class Suites, which was introduced back in October 2024.

Cathay Pacific will deploy its Aria-equipped Boeing 777-300ER aircraft to three destinations—Beijing, London, and Sydney—during the upcoming summer season.

From March 30 to October 26, Cathay Pacific will be utilizing the aircraft with its newest Business Class seats on flights from Hong Kong International Airport to Beijing Capital International Airport, London Heathrow Airport, and Sydney Kingsford Smith Airport.

In April, the Aria-equipped Boeing 777-300ERs are scheduled to fly five times per week to Beijing-Capital and Sydney each and daily to London-

Heathrow.

When the airline introduced the Aria Business Class Suite in October 2024, the airline's sole destination during the month was Beijing-Capital. Since then, the Aria-equipped 777-300ERs have flown to other destinations across Asia including Taiwan Taoyuan International Airport, Shanghai Pudong International Airport, and Tokyo Narita International Airport.

In June, Cathay Pacific will operate the Boeing 777-300ERs on 16 weekly departures from Hong Kong to Beijing-Capital (five weekly departures), London-Heathrow (daily), and Sydney (four weekly departures).

For October 2025, the airline scheduled daily flights to Beijing-Capital and London-Heathrow, as well as five weekly itineraries from/to Sydney.

About the development, Lavinia Lau, Chief Customer and Commercial Officer, Cathay Pacific, said, the Aria suites would be followed by brand new lie-flat Business Class seats on its Airbus A330 aircraft and, later, a new First Class experience on its incoming Boeing 777-9 aircraft.
