Kazakhstan opens visa-free travel to 56 countries

- A Monitor Desk Report

Dhaka: Kazakhstan is preparing to ease its border controls by expanding visa-free access to citizens of 56 countries, according to a recent announcement from the Ministry of Internal Affairs.

The move is part of a broader strategy to streamline entry procedures and boost international travel to the Central Asian nation.

Under the new policy, eligible foreign nationals will be able to enter and leave Kazakhstan without a visa, provided each visit does not exceed 30 consecutive days.

Additionally, the total duration of stay must not surpass 90 days within any 180-day period. Passport holders from the listed countries will benefit from the relaxed travel rules once implemented.
