“This recognition comes at a high time that the industry has hit the ground running, building and growing after the global Covid-19 pandemic, and highlights the value we deliver to our customers as a low-cost, value-driven aviation and travel services group,” said Meranun

on November 8, as per reports.

“Looking ahead, we will continue our mission in delivering unparalleled customer experience while continuing to positively contribute to the economy and the industry, regionally and beyond,” he added.

The ‘Aviation 100’ poll is a comprehensive process spanning the entire year, consisting of regional-specific votes from industry experts including airlines, lessors, banks, law firms and other key stakeholders.

It is renowned for its credibility in identifying the most exceptional figures in finance, leasing and law, along with top executives from leading airlines.

The awards ceremony was held on the sidelines of the Airline Economics Growth Frontiers Asia Pacific conference and was attended by 700 aviation professionals.
