Dhaka: There's something unforgettable about the view from above—whether gazing over valleys, cliffs, or oceans. But some of the world's most breathtaking panoramas come with a twist: transparent walkways that reveal sheer drops beneath your feet.

Tianmen Mountain Skywalk, China

Clinging to the cliffs of Tianmen, or “Heavenly Gate” Mountain, this narrow 1.6-meter-wide glass path curves around the edge of Zhangjiajie National Forest Park. With nothing but air beneath you, the view is either awe-inspiring or panic-inducing.

Grand Canyon Skywalk, USA

Suspended over the Colorado River, this horseshoe-shaped glass bridge in Arizona offers one of the best views of the Grand Canyon. Owned by the Hualapai Tribe, it's been drawing thrill-seekers since 2007.

Sapa Glass Bridge, Vietnam

At 2,000 meters above sea level, the "Dragon in Cloud" bridge near the Ô Quy Hồ Pass lives up to its name. Spanning 60 meters, it opens up stunning views of northern Vietnam's mountainous landscape.

Zhangjiajie Grand Canyon Glass Bridge, China

Once the tallest and longest glass bridge in the world, this 430-meter span in Hunan Province still delivers unmatched drama—especially with a bungee jumping platform at its center.

Bihar glass bridge, India

Situated among five scenic hills and inspired by the glass bridge in China's Hangzhou Province, India's first glass skywalk is in Rajgir, in Bihar's Nalanda district. Recently constructed, the bridge accommodates up to 40 visitors at a time and is already attracting tourists and thrill-seekers alike.

Dachstein Skywalk, Austria

One of the most spectacular Alpine views is offered from the Dachstein Skywalk in Austria. From here, you can admire the southern part of the Dachstein, a region recognised as a UNESCO World Heritage Site for its natural beauty and cultural significance. The circular path also leads over Austria's longest suspension bridge, giving visitors the chance to enjoy sweeping views of the Alps.

Hongyagu Glass Footbridge, China

Located in the scenic Hebei Province of north-eastern China, the Hongyagu Glass Footbridge spans an impressive 488 m, making it the longest glass bridge in the world. It connects two steep cliffs and hangs 288 m above a lush valley. Four metres wide, it provides dramatic views of waterfalls and mountains and a thrilling walk for the brave.

Glacier skywalk, Canada

Suspended above a canyon between Banff and Jasper National Parks, the Glacier Skywalk is part of a larger Discovery Walk, complete with educational displays about the area's geology, wildlife and history. The experience is both informative and awe-inspiring.

Chamonix skywalk, France

Though technically not a bridge or walkway, this unique glass installation deserves mention. "Step into the Void", located on the upper terrace of the Aiguille du Midi, is a glass room with a transparent floor that allows visitors to feel suspended amidst the highest peaks of Western Europe. The experience - and the view - are unforgettable.

Skywalk Biokovo, Croatia

In southern Croatia, within the stunning Biokovo Nature Park, a recently opened attraction is drawing plenty of visitors. The Skywalk Biokovo, shaped like a horseshoe, offers sweeping views of the Adriatic Sea. It is simply mesmerising.
